China Sourcing Summit 2010 Attracts Global Sourcing Industry Leaders

More than 300 gather to discuss development of Chinese outsourcing market

HOUSTON, June 18, 2010 — TPI, the largest sourcing data and advisory firm in the world and a unit of Information Services Group, Inc. (ISG) (NASDAQ:III), an industry-leading information-based services company, today announced that the China Sourcing Summit 2010, the country's first national conference aimed at promoting development of the domestic outsourcing industry, attracted more than 300 participants, including services buyers, providers and advisors as well as key officials from the government.

The event, which was organized by TPI, the China Council for International Investment Promotion (CCIIP) and the Hangzhou Municipal Government and sponsored by the Ministry of Commerce (MOC) and other government ministries, brought global leaders and local experts together to discuss the evolution of China's sourcing market and the impact its fast-growing economy and global delivery capability are having on the industry worldwide.

The theme of the event, which covered topics such as sourcing governance, data privacy, intellectual property protection and government regulation, was "Survival of the Fittest." Speakers included executives with experience at Disney, DuPont and high-tech leader Symantec, who discussed strategies for accelerating the growth of outsourcing by international firms. Participants also had the opportunity to tour the facilities of local service providers and learn from the experiences of multinational buyers already working in China.

"The sourcing industry in China is changing dramatically, and that has created opportunities for the fittest companies to prosper," said Michael Rehkopf, Partner and Director, North Asia, TPI. "At the China Sourcing Summit, we not only identified the challenges for clients and service providers wanting to capitalize on these opportunities, we also shared ideas on how they can overcome them."

Since launching in China last year, TPI has been working with the MOC and CCIIP to accelerate development of the sourcing market, including the establishment of protocols designed to make the country more attractive to multinational corporations seeking to diversify their global footprints.

“The emergence of China as a global sourcing destination is an exciting and important development for our industry,” said Michael P. Connors, Chairman & CEO, ISG and TPI, who hosted the launch of the China Sourcing Summit 2010. “The success of this event proves that clients and services providers from around the world want to do business here. With our partners at the MOC and CCIIP, TPI can help them do that.”
